Deadly synagogue shooting suspect in California linked to mosque arson

One woman was killed and three people injured in Saturday's shooting.

A 19-year-old man who authorities said gave himself up to police shortly after carrying out a deadly shooting in a Southern California synagogue filled with Sabbath worshippers is also under investigation in connection with an unsolved mosque arson.

The gunman walked into the suburban San Diego synagogue late Saturday morning, the last day of the weeklong Jewish holiday of Passover, and opened fire with an assault-style rifle, killing one woman inside and wounding three others, including the rabbi, authorities said.

He then sped away in a car, escaping an off-duty U.S. Border Patrol agent who shot at the getaway vehicle but missed the suspect. The suspect pulled over and surrendered to police officers a short time later.

The suspect was later identified as John Earnest, 19, of San Diego, the apparent author of a "manifesto" who claimed to have set a nearby mosque on fire last month and professed drawing inspiration from the gunman who killed nearly 50 at two mosques in New Zealand.

San Diego County Sheriff Bill Gore said police and the FBI were investigating Earnest's "possible involvement" in the March 24 pre-dawn arson fire at the Islamic Center of Escondido, about 15 miles north of Poway. No one was hurt at the mosque fire.

Gore said Earnest has no prior criminal record.

Saturday's gun violence at the Congregation Chabad temple in the town of Poway, California, about 23 miles north of downtown San Diego, unfolded six months to the day after 11 worshippers were killed and six others wounded by a gunman who stormed the Tree of Life synagogue in Pittsburgh yelling, "All Jews must die."

The assailant in that massacre, said to be the deadliest attack ever against Jews on U.S. soil, was also arrested.

San Diego County Sheriff's Department officials said in a statement the gunman in Saturday's attack was believed to have acted alone and that there "are no known threats to religious gatherings."

But the Passover violence came amid an upsurge in reports of anti-Semitism nationwide and abroad and followed a recent spate of deadly attacks on places of worship around the world.

Suicide bombings during Easter services at several churches in Sri Lanka killed more than 250 people. A gunman who opened fire at two mosques in Christchurch, New Zealand, on March 15 left 49 people dead and more than 40 wounded, some as they knelt in prayer.

Poway Mayor Steve Vaus characterized Saturday's shooting as a "hate crime," saying his assessment was based on statements uttered by the gunman when he entered the synagogue.

At a news conference later, Gore told reporters: "Clearly it's being investigated as a homicide, but we're also looking at the hate crime possible violation as well as federal civil rights violations."

A rambling, violently anti-Semitic, anti-Muslim screed written by an individual calling himself John Earnest was found posted to the online text-storage site Pastebin.com and the file-storage site Mediafire.com. Links to the content on both sources were posted on the Internet message board 8chan.

In that letter, the author also claimed credit for the Escondido mosque arson, which was put out by congregants inside who were alerted by the smell of smoke. Local media at the time reported that a message scrawled on the driveway of the mosque mentioned the New Zealand massacre.

The synagogue on Saturday was hosting a holiday celebration due to culminate in a final Passover meal that evening. Authorities said about 100 people were inside the temple. Eyewitnesses reported hearing about a dozen gunshots, punctuated by the sound of a man yelling inside the temple.

Gore told reporters that four people were struck by gunfire and taken to a nearby hospital, where one victim, an "older woman," died. Authorities said the rabbi underwent surgery for treatment of wounds to his hands. The sheriff's office said the two other victims, a 34-year-old man and a girl, were each struck by shrapnel but were "doing well." REUTERS

Sri Lanka raids hardline Islamist group headquarters

2 Sri Lankan police raided the headquarters of a hardline Islamist group founded by the suspected ringleader behind the Easter suicide bombings of churches and hotels, a Reuters witness said, as Sunday mass was canceled due to fears of further attacks. Armed police in Kattankudy searched the headquarters of the National Thawheedh Jamaath (NTJ) and detained one man at the premises, a Reuters reporter at the scene said.

On Saturday the government banned the NTJ under new emergency laws. The authorities believe Zahran Hashim, the founder of NTJ, masterminded and was one of the nine suicide bombers in the attacks on Easter Sunday which killed 253 people. Islamic State claimed responsibility for the attacks. Police suspect the bombings were carried out by two local Islamist groups, including the one established by Zahran. REUTERS

Former US Sen. Richard Lugar dies at age 87

3 Centrist Republican Richard Lugar, a soft-spoken foreign policy powerhouse who championed nuclear nonproliferation during 36 years in the U.S. Senate, died on Sunday at age 87. The Lugar Center, a Washington-based nonprofit, said in a statement that he died peacefully at the Inova Fairfax Heart and Vascular Institute in Virginia due to complications from CIDP, a chronic neurological disorder. Lugar, a professorial Midwesterner known for his keen intellect and mild demeanor, served as mayor of Indianapolis from 1968 to 1975 before his long stint in the Senate from 1977 to 2013. He was the longest-serving senator ever from Indiana. Lugar was an influential Republican voice on foreign policy. Lugar, a former Rhodes scholar and an avid runner into his 70s, served as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and also headed the Agriculture Committee. REUTERS

Bolton: US signed, never paid for N. Korea document

4 The United States signed a document agreeing to pay North Korea for the care of American Otto Warmbier but never paid the $2 million Pyongyang demanded, White House national security adviser John Bolton said on Sunday. Bolton, who said he was not part of the administration at the time, confirmed newspaper reports that North Korea demanded the money before Warmbier was flown out of Pyongyang in a coma on June 13, 2017. Asked whether U.S. envoy Joseph Yun signed the document when he went to retrieve Warmbier, Bolton told "Fox News Sunday" in an interview: "That is what I am told, yes." He said no payment was made. "It is very clear to me from my looking into it in the past few days that nobody was paid. That is clear," Bolton said. Warmbier, a University of Virginia student visiting North Korea, was imprisoned in January 2016. REUTERS

World turns out for record 'Avengers: Endgame' movie debut

The previous box office record was set last year by "Avengers: Infinity War."

Fans around the globe packed movie theaters for the debut of "Avengers: Endgame" over the weekend, pushing total ticket sales for the Walt Disney superhero spectacle to a stunning $1.2 billion and crushing records in dozens of countries.

"Endgame" generated an unprecedented $350 million in the United States and Canada from Thursday night through Sunday, according to Disney estimates. The three-hour action spectacle that revealed the fates of Iron Man, Thor and other popular comic-book heroes also made history in China, Brazil, France, Egypt,

South Africa and 38 other markets.

In China, the world's second-largest movie market, "Endgame" collected $330.5 million since its debut on Wednesday.

The historic weekend helps put Disney on course for what analysts say looks like an unparalleled year. The company is set to release "The Lion King," "Toy Story 4" and several other potential blockbusters in the coming months.

"Endgame" is unique because it is the culmination of a story told in 22 Marvel Studios films that have drawn crowds to cinemas for a decade.

Audiences "have proven over and over again that they care about these characters," said Cathleen Taff, Disney's head of theatrical distribution. "I think they wanted to see how this epic story resolves itself."

"Endgame" stars Robert Downey Jr., Chris Hemsworth, Scarlett Johansson and others as a group of superheroes battling the villain Thanos, played by Josh Brolin.

Just days ago, the movie industry was divided on whether "Endgame" had a shot at hitting $300 million in the domestic market. The movie blew past that level and landed far above the previous record of $257.7 million set a year ago by "Avengers: Infinity War."

That film ended with a cliffhanger in which many heroes appeared to turn to dust, stoking anticipation for "Endgame."

To meet demand, theaters added showtimes and sold out shows at odd hours such as 7 a.m. AMC Entertainment, operators of the world's largest theater chain, kept some locations open for 72 hours straight to keep running "Endgame."

Even the lofty estimates from box office prognosticators proved too low.

"What we didn't count on is that fans would show up happily at three in the morning for a three-hour movie," said Paul Dergarabedian, senior media analyst at measurement company Comscore. "We are in completely uncharted territory here."

"Endgame" proved to be a global cultural phenomenon.

A sign at a London subway station urged riders not to talk about the movie's plot so they would not spoil it for others, according to a photo posted on Twitter by Disney Chief Executive Bob Iger.

Some fans in China paid more than 500 yuan, or $74.14, for "Endgame" tickets on the gray market, far more than the average 60 yuan average price at cinemas nationwide.

In Hollywood, Susan Macias, 44, watched all 22 Marvel films at the historic El Capitan Theatre in a sold-out marathon that concluded with "Endgame."

"It was well worth the three days of being in there," Macias said afterward. "I'm just full of emotions." REUTERS

Former US deputy attorney general: If Trump were not president, he would be indicted

Former top Justice Department official Sally Yates said on Sunday that if Donald Trump were not president, he would have been indicted on obstruction charges in Special Counsel Robert Mueller's Russia investigation.

Yates, a career federal prosecutor who rose to acting attorney general before Trump fired her in 2017 fewer than two weeks into his presidency, told NBC's "Meet the Press" the Republican president was shielded by department guidelines that a sitting president should not be indicted.

"I've personally prosecuted obstruction cases on far, far less evidence than this," Yates said. "And yes, I believe, if he were not the president of the United States, he would likely be indicted on obstruction."

Mueller's report, redacted for classified and other sensitive information, detailed a series of actions by Trump to impede the investigation. It did not make a conclusion on whether those actions constituted the crime of obstruction, but said the findings did not exonerate him.

The report cited attempts by Trump to thwart the Mueller investigation, as well as the president telling Russian officials he had faced "great pressure" from the probe but that it had been eased after he fired FBI Director James Comey.

Yates told NBC there was a larger question raised by the report, which she said painted a "devastating portrait" of a campaign that welcomed Russian intervention, lied about it and then tried to cover it up.

"Is this the kind of conduct that we should expect from the president of the United States?" she said. "I mean, when the Russians came knocking at their door, you would expect that a man who likes to make a show of hugging the flag would've done the patriotic thing and would've notified law enforcement."

Yates was fired by Trump after she took the extraordinarily rare step of defying the White House and refused to defend new travel restrictions targeting seven Muslim-majority nations. REUTERS

Positive challenges create buzz on social media

Online challenge that encourages cleaning up different places has seen tens of thousands of people doing just that under #TrashtagChallenge. Metro investigates the phenomenon.

DANIEL CASILLAS,
letters@metro.us

Over the last decade we have become used to seeing millions of people participating in social media challenges. Most of them are fun, some are spooky and even dangerous.

But recently, the so-called positive challenges have taken the lead by involving people to act for the good of environmental or social causes. One of them is #TrashtagChallenge. The viral hashtag encouraged people to clean different places and post the "before and after" photographs on Facebook, Instagram and Twitter.

Although it has become popular just in recent weeks, #Trashtag emerged in 2015 thanks to a project of the company UCO Gear. At that time it wasn't so famous, but it went viral after Facebook user Byron Román posted before and after pictures of a place he had cleaned, inviting "bored teens" to "take a photo of an area that needs some cleaning or maintenance." So far, that post has been shared more than 333,000 times and reached more than 101,000 reactions.

This challenge is quite important as, according to statistics, around 2.01 billion tons of garbage are generated per year around the globe. And that figure is growing because of an increase in the world's population and growth of the economy. In fact, every person, on average, generates more than 1 kilogram of garbage a day, and much of this waste ends up thrown on the streets, or in the forests or seas. The World Bank estimates in its report "What a Waste 2.0" that by 2050, will be generating 3.4 billion tons of litter per year.

Some participants acknowledge that they decided to take part in #TrashtagChallenge because of the impact it has, and thanks to other people promoting it on social networks.

"A follower from Mexico told me that she had seen this challenge on her Facebook wall and that she would pass it to me if I was interested. I really liked that, so I provided feedback," Abbey (@heyabbey), a poet from Spain who participated in the #TrashtagChallenge, told Metro.

Other social media users, such as Filip Vinklrek (@filipvinklerek), from Czech Republic, told Metro that he appreciates these types of challenges because they have a good purpose.

"I like this challenge very much. I already saw some challenges on social media: drinking beer, doing push-ups, etc. But this one has a good purpose and makes people do something important for nature that could motivate others to care about our planet," Vinklerek stated.

Jaume Rigo (@jaumerigo), from Mallorca, Spain, said to Metro that he was very satisfied and proud to participate in the #TrashtagChallenge.

"You feel it's been worth getting up early on a Sunday. I am proud of people for coming together voluntarily to do things like that."

Specialists believe such positive challenges demonstrate that younger generations are very idealistic and seek to make their world a better place.

"It shows that the young generations are very idealistic and believe in making their world better," Marcus Messner, associate director at Richard T. Robertson School of Media and Culture at Virginia Commonwealth University, explained.

He concluded: "The Trash Challenge is a great example of how social media can still be used for the better."

Q&A

MARCUS MESSNER,
Associate Director at Richard T.
Robertson School of Media and Culture, Virginia
Commonwealth University

How do social media challenges appear?

They are usually planned by an individual or groups of social media users, very often on Instagram. At this point, the challenges can be on any topic, but the ones that have gone viral have been somewhat unusual. For instance, the Tide Pod Challenge or the Trash Challenge. They are built around a theme and include visuals and hashtags, which allow them to gain a large audience quickly.

Why do social media users participate?

Young social media users spend a considerable share of their time in the digital world. What older generations know as a test of courage or game of chicken has now moved to social media for the latest generation. What has changed is that these challenges are not just among their immediate peers, but go viral on a national and global level. That's how it is much more likely that young social media users can be confronted with a dangerous challenge.

What about challenges that could be dangerous?

It is difficult to determine the motivations of people who start these dangerous challenges. What makes social media users participate in them are the images that spread across Instagram and Facebook. The images often portray a game and the danger is not immediately apparent to those taking on these tests.

Recently, positive challenges have emerged. Could they become popular and increase in numbers?

Absolutely! They just need to strike a nerve with social media audiences and get them to do something in real life. For any social media campaign it is important to get users to do more than just like and comment. They need to be motivated to take real-life action. Promoting a cause with authentic and appealing images is key in that effort.

It's been said in this cocky sports corner of the United States in recent years that the Patriots' season doesn't start until January. Well, we can now say that the Celtics don't get serious until April.

The C's offered up their best showing in years Sunday in Milwaukee, annihilating the hapless Bucks in Game 1 of their semifinal series, 112-90. The Celtics remain undefeated in the 2018-19 NBA post-season, and absolutely look like legit contenders to the NBA crown right now.

Boston played a near-perfect game on both ends of the floor as Kyrie Irving (26 points) paved the way on offense and the C's limited likely NBA MVP Giannis Antetokounmpo to 22 points on 7-of-21 shooting.

The "Greek Freak" was a minus 24 in plus/minus in Game 1, which was the worst output of anyone who stepped on the floor at Fiserv Forum Sunday. Antetokounmpo shot just 7-of-21 from the field and did not make his first field goal until the first minute of the second quarter. The C's did a tremendous job of discouraging Antetokounmpo from owning the paint early as he wound up settling for deep shots in the second half. He took five 3-pointers in the game, hitting three of them, but the Celtics will surely take Antetokounmpo on the perimeter any day of the week.

"He's such a great player that our focus was to make sure that we just made it tough on him every time," Celtics big man Al Horford said. "All of our guys, at different times, were on him and it was just making sure he earned everything he got. I feel like we did a really good job of that."

The Celtics raced out to a 26-17 first-quarter lead, but Milwaukee did show life in the second quarter, going on a 15-0 run of their own. That was really the only impressive stretch of the afternoon, however, for the team with the NBA's top regular-season record as the Celtics outscored the Bucks, 36-21, in the third quarter and 24-19 in the fourth.

Coming up huge for the Celtics was Jaylen Brown, who played a team-high 36 minutes. Brown was 8-of-14 from the floor, including three made 3-pointers. The C's' ultra-athletic swingman also had monster dunk right in the mug of Antetokounmpo.

Gordon Hayward was strong off the bench for Boston, adding 13 points. Terry Rozier also had a strong outing off the pine, popping in 11 points and pulling down nine rebounds.

Celtics center Aron Baynes left the game in the second half with an injured ankle but is expected to be healthy enough to play in Game 2 Tuesday in Milwaukee (8 p.m., TNT).

The Patriots selected Auburn quarterback Jarrett Stidham in the fourth round. GETTY IMAGES

Patriots receiving bouquets from nearly everyone for 2019 draft

Bill Belichick broke out the whips, chains, handcuffs and a 9-iron in his NFL Draft bedroom this past weekend, spicing things up beyond belief.

The Patriots are typically one of the most boring teams on draft day — often trading back, and often taking players from non-sexy positions like offensive tackle and potential special teams aces. But for the first time in 19 years, Belichick went all Madden Franchise mode as he drafted a wide receiver in the first round, a cornerback in the second round, a running back in the third round and a quarterback in Round 4.

Here's a look at the full 2019 Patriots draft.

Round 1, pick 32: N'Keal Harry, WR, Arizona State

Round 2, pick 45: Joejuan Williams, CB, Vanderbilt

Round 3, pick 77: Chase Winovich, DE, Michigan

Round 3, pick 87: Damien Harris, RB, Alabama

Round 3, pick 101: Yodny Cajuste, OT, West Virginia

Round 4, pick 118: Hjalte Froholdt, G, Arkansas

Round 4, pick 133: Jarrett Stidham, QB, Auburn

Round 5, pick 159: Byron Cowart, DT, Maryland

Round 5, pick 163: Jake Bailey, P, Stanford

Round 7, pick 252: Ken Webster, DB, Mississippi

Quarterback, of course, created the biggest stir for the Patriots this past weekend as there is now a new face in the mix to potentially take over the reigns from Tom Brady when he retires.

Stidham is your classic Patriots value pick, as he was highly ranked coming out of high school and was rated as a first-round talent as recently as last September by Bleacher Report. Stidham's overall numbers actually dipped at Auburn from 2017 to 2018, though he threw the same number of touchdown passes (18) despite playing in one less game this past season.

Here are Stidham's stats the past two years at Auburn.

2017: 14 games, 66.5 completion percentage, 3158 yards, 18 touchdowns, six interceptions, 151.0 passer rating.

2018: 13 games, 60.7 completion percentage, 2794 yards, 18 touchdowns, five interceptions, 137.7 passer rating.

The Patriots are likely fans of how well Stidham protects the football as only five interceptions in SEC play is not too shabby. Considering that top pick Kyler Murray threw seven picks last year in the Big 12 and top 10 pick Daniel Jones tossed nine INTs in the ACC last year, Stidham's ball protection numbers are terrific.

Aries Look inward and make personal growth a priority. A change of scenery, company or activity will do you good. Walk away from temptation, indulgent behavior and unsafe situations.

Taurus Don't make a change based on hearsay. If someone makes you an offer, get it in writing. If you rethink the way you handle money, you'll discover a way to lower your overhead.

Gemini Keep your distance from anyone looking for an argument. Keep an eye out for opportunities that will allow you to use your talents and skills. Romance will improve a relationship.

Cancer Don't take anything or anyone for granted. If you want something done, do it yourself without overspending. Aim for stability and greater security, not for uncertainty and confusion.

Leo Change doesn't always bring the happiness you are looking for. Before you alter your life personally or professionally, consider the consequences of your actions.

Virgo You'll be torn between what you want to do and what you should do. Stick to facts and avoid temptation. Do what you know is right.

Libra The best way to overcome personal problems or handle interactions with a difficult person in your life is to offer incentives. Once you take care of your responsibilities, do something you enjoy.

Scorpio You'll have plenty of options, ideas and support, so don't hesitate to follow your heart, chase your dreams and fulfill your destiny. An offer shouldn't cost you emotionally or financially.

Sagittarius Problems will develop if you let someone meddle in your personal affairs. Don't mix business with pleasure or allow friends or relatives to interfere in your love life.

Capricorn Don't share your thoughts, feelings or plans with anyone. Make adjustments at home that will contribute to your comfort and entertainment. Be honest when dealing with tax, legal and health issues.

Aquarius Let your experience guide you to make the right choice. Getting together with an old friend or attending a reunion will lead to mixed emotions.

Pisces A change of attitude will alter your lifestyle. Not everyone will be happy with the choices you make, but you have to do what's best for you.
